

Please do not allow the "NJ Do Not Call List" to be weakened by allowing telemarketers to call if they have conducted business with someone during the last 18 months. If I have done business with them and I want to reach them, I know how. If I dont want to reach them, it is just harrasement.

I am in the advertising field and I understand the need for a business to sollicite new customers however, I am also a working mother and I resent being disturbed during dinner and the few hours that I have with my children each day.

In the past I have been harrassed by solicitors that call repeatedly despit my request to be taken off of their list. My right to privacy and to peace and quiet outways their right to solicit business. Furthermore, businesses have alternative means to contact potential customers, while my phone is my only means for family and friends to reach me in the evenings.

The telemarketers have abused their opportunity to use the phone lines (that we the consumers pay for) and now they have lost that opportunity. They have done enough crying. Accept it and move on. The laws are just the way the public wants them now. PLEASE, dont change them.

Thank You
